

Stephanie Streete, BSc., BVMS

Department of Emergency and Critical Care
ACCESS | Los Angeles

Dr. Stephanie Streete has traveled the world with her heart invested in veterinary medicine.

Starting off life on the lush Caribbean island of Jamaica, she grew up with her parents and half-brother in Kingston before moving to the U.S. and completing her undergraduate degree at Texas A&M University (go Aggies!).

Australia then beckoned, and Dr. Streete answered, earning her DVM degree from Murdoch University in Perth. She stayed in Australia to complete a one-year, specialty surgical internship at a private practice in Perth and then moved to take a position in the Anesthesia Department at the University of Melbourne. While Dr. Streete's main area of interest in veterinary medicine is anesthesia and analgesia, she also enjoys the challenge of emergency medicine and worked in a private, multi-specialty and emergency practice in Melbourne for two years.

When she is not saving lives, you can usually find Dr. Streete in the water! She enjoys all watersports, especially surfing, and makes sure to stay close to the coast. Dr. Streete also loves to dance and shares her life with two dachshunds and two cats at home.
